German engineers employed by the SMA were called to a conference in Karlshorst 15 April 1947, which was held under the direction of Prof. Lebyankov, Colonel-Engineer. Lebyankov instructed the engineers to do everything possible to speed production on export orders for Czechoslovakia, Poland, Switzerland, Sweden, and Yugoslavia. Lebyankov stated that production on these orders greatly bolsters the Russian Five Year Plan, and added that the Moscow Conference might limit Russian reparations out of current production, which would be a serious blow to Russian economic planning.

[REDACTED] to try to speed up production on certain orders. He returned from his inspection [REDACTED] and reported the following status:

C. G. Haubold, Chemnitz:

2,500,000 RM machinery for cellulose production; reparations
4,000,000 RM " " paper " ; "
1,500,000 RM textile machinery; "
5,000 RM film production machinery; "
1,500,000 RM centrifugal machines; for export to Poland
1,500,000 RM refrigerator machines; " " " "
1,000,000 RM cellulose production machines; for export to Austria.

Entire production is lagging twenty percent, because of lack of hard steel which is supposed to come from Sweden.
